

FAMILY TIES

Bringing modern motherhood into the fashion frame, Emilia Wickstead was inspired for her pre-fall 2020 lookbook by Helmut Newton and wife Alice Springs' 1999 book, Us and Them, which features a B&W portrait series of famous mothers including Caroline of Monaco and Donatella Versace with their children. Wickstead, herself a mother of two, enlisted her inner circle, including designer mothers Charlotte Dellal and Sabine Getty plus offspring, to model her 'childproof' collection ahead of Mother's Day.

PALETTE CLEANSER

Nothing says stealth style like winter white, and A/W 2020 showgoers walked the talk in many shades of chalk. Coincidentally, we've never seen white jeans and cream knitwear look fresher than at Isabel Marant for pre-fall.

HIGHER GROUND

Introducing new Italian-made shoe brand Nodaletto from Julia Toledano, the daughter of chairman and CEO of LVMH Fashion Group Sidney Toledano. Retro-inspired and dominated by chunky soles, Toledano's boots, pumps and mules are moving the needle on summer's barely-there sandals.

KNIT WIT

From collared marl-knit cardigans to flared ribbed pants, '70s-inspired knitwear is looking large for autumn. Saluting that space between athleisure and loungewear is NY-based label Live The Process, co-founded by former fashion PR Robyn Berkley. The multitasking result is both practical (read: moisture-wicking, breathable and with four-way stretch) and purdy. ## BIJOU BOTS

Who said fine jewellery can't be fun? Sydney expat Tatiana Van Lancker's Van Robots are handmade in Tuscany and playfully augmented with articulated arms and legs.

The Upside's Jodhi Meares shares her wellness life hacks

TRY ... "Biossance, a brand I recently discovered in the US that's 100 per cent sustainable, vegan and ethical. It was developed by some clever scientists in Berkeley who have created plant-based squalane — a mega moisturiser that mimics our skin's natural hydration."
DOWNLOAD ... "I'm not an early adopter when it comes to tech — the kids in the office call me 'Analogue'! — but I've just started getting into podcasts and recently listened to a fascinating one on quantum consciousness with Dr Amit Goswami."
SWITCH OFF ... "I'm always outdoors. Sitting under a tree with a book or getting in the ocean is absolute peace for me. With yoga, the more traditional, the better, and I love chanting — it's a moving meditation — and shavasana is just the best."

RESORT RENAISSANCE

One hundred or so years after French knitwear house Le Kasha — which used to supply Jeanne Lanvin and Coco Chanel — was founded, its Parisian descendant Mali Marciano has rejuvenated the brand for the next century. Having started with cosy cashmere, the globetrotter (whose family also owns design hotels in Paris) has moved into timeless linens that you'll want to bookmark now. ## NO MOUNTAIN HIGH ENOUGH

Alpine goes avant-garde as Miuccia Prada's incoming co-creative director, Raf Simons, teams up with Aussie outerwear brand Templa on a high-performance ski/snowboarding capsule that's as functional as it is fashion.
