

Shop with Style

What our jewellery director Jessica Diamond loves this week

ONE TO WATCH

Lucy Delius knows a thing or two about jewellery having worked as a PR for 15 years for several brands, and she has now launched her own collection. Her understanding of everyday pieces shines through in an offering of vintage-inspired chains, charms, hoops and rings. From £200; lucydelius.co

TAKING FLIGHT

Harumi Klossowska de Rola's third collection for the French jeweller Maison Goossens focuses on the insect world, with pretty depictions of butterflies and dragonflies in necklaces, rings, brooches and even a headpiece. These summer-ready earrings have set me all of a flutter. £405; goossens-paris.com

IN THE MONEY

Since we're not using coins as much as we once were, the Royal Mint is diversifying into jewellery, with its debut collection named 886, after the year the institution was founded. Expect minimal unisex shapes in silver and gold designed by the brand's creative director and fashion-crowd favourite Dominic Jones. From £99 (from Friday); 886.royalmint.com

ANIMAL MAGIC

Cartier is brilliant at an animal jewel (hello, Panthère), but it doesn't often mess around with its icons. So don't miss its Les Indomptables double-headed cuffs, where different creatures meld features. A stripy crocodile with a scaly zebra? Yes please. Prices on application, Cartier

LOVE STORY

It may be inspired by a 19th-century French empress, but the new Joséphine Duo Éternel collection by Chaumet has contemporary and playful touches. I've fallen for its "toi et moi" rings and pendants with interlocked pavé-diamond pears. From £11,400; chaumet.com

HUG IT OUT

Jessica McCormack's Gypset earrings have quite the cult following and now she has designed another modern classic: the Huggie. Blackened gold and button-back-set diamonds feature, but my favourites are these mixed-metal and diamond hoops. Who knew a staple could be so special? From £1,750; jessicamccormack.com

DAY TIME

A date window is one of the most useful extra functions a watch can have. And when it's set in a dark grey dial that's encircled by a diamond bezel? Useful and beautiful, then. Lady-Datejust, £12,700; rolex.com

GAME, SET AND MATCH

I'm not usually a fan of imitation jewellery, but the zirconia tennis necklace — like a diamond tennis bracelet, only bigger — by the London-based brand Daphne is a winner. Pair with a white T-shirt for a hit of luxury. £250; shop-daphne.com

I, ROBOT

I love Van Robot's articulated, gem-set robot pendants. And founder Tatiana Van Lancker has now created Argento Van Robot, a more accessible version in the classic combo of turquoise and silver — with a side of diamonds, of course. £950; vanrobot.com

GREAT DANES

The Danish jeweller Elhanati and glassware artist Helle Mardahl have teamed up to create a dreamy collection of jewellery boxes and dishes in an irresistible candy-cane colour palette. Whether you use the trinket trays and pots to store your jewellery or not, they're pretty enough to take pride of place on any mantelpiece. Treasure Bonbonniere glass jar, £495; matchesfashion.com